
Collaborating for Young Athletes: theBMSproject.org and 4D Leaders Join Forces in Pilot Program

NEWS: In a four-month pilot agreement, theBMSproject.org and 4D Leaders will partner to assess opportunities for improved communication and synergistic contributions to each other's organizational goals. The pilot will run through the end of summer 2025 and include a short NEWS section in 4D Leaders' monthly newsletter. The inserted content will share news of theBMSproject's ongoing efforts to address various challenges plaguing youth sports. The 4D Leaders monthly newsletter will be distributed to theBMSproject's Quarterly Newsletter recipients. During the pilot, the BMS' newsletter distribution will be suspended.

We encourage you to support and not opt out of the 4D Leader's newsletter. The goal of theBMSproject's and 4D Leaders' joint efforts is simply to better serve young athletes and their families. By collaborating with each other and with youth sports' advocates and local and national youth sports' organizations, it is anticipated that the emerging relationship will contribute to creating people who are confident, self-motivated and empowered through youth sports participation. Furthermore, it is anticipated that our collaboration will help safeguard the safety, good health and wellbeing of all youth sports participants which include our young athletes, their families.

theBMSproject's primary goal is to function as an initial, concierge-style advisory organization and educational resource, guiding stakeholders of both 4D Leaders and theBMSproject to relevant "next-step" safety and well-being resources as needed.

The pilot's vision is large and bold: To continue to seek-out and partner with various other like-minded organizations in pursuit of our shared efforts to guide and protect future generations. Wondrous things grow from small hearts.

Together... here for our youth!
